Fyodor Dostoevsky, the master of psychological realism, invites you to unravel the intricate tapestry of guilt, poverty, and addiction in his timeless masterpiece, 'Crime and Punishment', alongside two mesmerizing novellas, 'Poor Folk' and 'The Gambler'.

Crime and Punishment: A Tale of Guilt and Redemption

In 'Crime and Punishment', Dostoevsky presents Rodion Raskolnikov, a brilliant but tormented young man who commits a heinous crime in the name of a twisted philosophy. As Raskolnikov grapples with the weight of his actions, he embarks on a harrowing journey of self-discovery, wrestling with guilt, morality, and the search for redemption.

Through Raskolnikov's tormented psyche, Dostoevsky explores the profound complexities of human nature, delving into the darkness that can lurk within us all and the possibility of redemption even in the face of our darkest deeds.

Poor Folk: A Heartbreaking Tale of Poverty and Unrequited Love

'Poor Folk' introduces us to Makar Devushkin, an impoverished clerk who pours his heart and soul into letters to Varvara Dobroselova, a young woman living in genteel poverty. Devushkin's unrequited love for Varvara unfolds in a series of poignant and deeply moving letters, capturing the desperation and longing of those trapped in the clutches of poverty.

Dostoevsky's keen eye for detail and profound empathy shine through in this novella, shedding light on the struggles and resilience of the marginalized and forgotten.

The Gambler: A Descent into Compulsive Addiction

In 'The Gambler', Dostoevsky turns his attention to the destructive power of addiction. Alexei, a young tutor, finds himself ensnared in the clutches of gambling, spiraling into a downward trajectory that threatens to consume him entirely.

Through Alexei's obsessive pursuit of fortune and his relentless self-destruction, Dostoevsky exposes the psychological turmoil and moral decay that can accompany addiction.
