PayPal CREATIVE BRIEF

created by Maggie Wiley / Alim Argubilo

THE PROBLEM

The brand's extensive service has also misinterpreted about PayPal being an online shopping payment system. Currently, the brand perception is that PayPal is just an alternative to credit cards or other means of online payment.

OUR GOAL

PayPal's main essence is to deal with our daily money transactions. Our goal is to clarify the misconceptions surrounding the brand and reiterate what PayPal is all about. A virtual wallet where the user is in control.

OUR KEY INSIGHT

Young entrepreneurs find ways on how to earn money to feel the sense of independence. At the same time, they are still supported by their parents. They need a service that would give them the flexibility of receiving money (either allowance from their parents, or getting paid from walking the dog as one of their part-time jobs), while still struggling to balance the life of a typical teenager.

WHO WILL WE ENGAGE?

Teenagers, whose age ranges from 12-17 years old, they try to balance between school, a part-time job, extra-curricular activities, family, and friends. At this point in their lives, they are starting to become independent and branch out their lives through their friends, classmates and other people around them. They are serious, and are trying to establish connections that would stand the test of time. They trust their friends and peers, basically because they value their opinions. They want control over their money, how they're going to use it, and when they're going to use it, but not want the complexities that come with using a credit card.

OUR MAIN MESSAGE

RECEIVE MONEY WHENEVER, WHEREVER.
