Unveiling the Untold Stories of Las Vegas' Racetrack Racketeers

In the glamorous and enigmatic city of Las Vegas, two worlds collided in a thrilling and dangerous game: motorsports and organized crime.

"Motorsports Meets The Mob In Vegas 1965-1971" takes you on a captivating journey through this intriguing chapter in history, where the roar of engines intertwined with the whispers of mobsters.

Through meticulous research and exclusive interviews, the book unveils the untold stories behind the legendary Stardust Grand Prix and Mint 400 races. These events, held amidst the glittering casinos and neon lights of the Las Vegas Strip, became a playground for both racing enthusiasts and mob figures seeking to expand their illicit empires.

Legendary Drivers, Notorious Mobsters, and a City on the Edge

Meet the charismatic drivers who risked life and limb on the treacherous racecourses, including Parnelli Jones, Mario Andretti, and A.J. Foyt. Discover the notorious mobsters who controlled the behind-the-scenes operations, such as Tony Spilotro, Frank Rosenthal, and Morris Shenker. And witness how the city of Las Vegas transformed into a vortex of glamour, greed, and violence.

The book provides a vivid account of the high-stakes gambits, daring heists, and brutal power struggles that unfolded in the shadows of the racetrack. It delves into the corrupt officials, crooked bookmakers, and ruthless enforcers who influenced the outcome of races and left an indelible mark on the city's history.
