But what is financial abuse? And how can you spot the signs?

Financial abuse is any form of abuse that involves money or finances. It can include:

- Controlling your access to money
- Taking your money without your permission
- Making you feel guilty or ashamed for spending money

- Pressuring you to buy things you don't need
- Preventing you from getting a job or education
- Stealing your identity to access your finances

Financial abuse can happen to anyone, regardless of age, gender, or socioeconomic status. But it is most common among people who are in intimate relationships or who have a disability.

If you think you are being financially abused, it is important to seek help immediately. There are many resources available to help you, including:

- The National Domestic Violence Hotline: 1-800-799-SAFE (7233)
- The National Elder Abuse Hotline: 1-800-677-1116
- The National Center on Domestic Violence, Trauma & Mental Health: 1-800-940-6877

You can also get help online at the following websites:

- The Hotline
- Domestic Shelters
- RAINN

Financial abuse is a serious problem, but it is one that can be overcome. With the right help, you can get your life back on track and achieve financial security.
